

MILTON COLLINS

From 1968 to 1998, I was a teacher/administrator in Michigan public schools, having taught in K-12 classrooms and Title I, and later I served as a coordinator of State/Federal programs and curriculum. From 1998 to the present, I have provided schoolwide training and school improvement guidance to more than 80 schools throughout Michigan.

In addition to authoring the Bridges modules and MAS/FPS toolkits for school improvement support, I have provided school improvement training at numerous workshops and at state and Federal conferences. My goal is to help schools develop a comprehensive plan that will meet the school (and District's) needs as well as meet all state and Federal guidelines. The plan we develop will identify research-proven strategies and planned support to help teachers effectively implement the new strategies that target identified weaknesses and will ultimately raise student achievement. Please contact me at miltcollins@centurytel.net for additional information and availability.